

Dr. Hoy holds a clinical faculty appointment in Medical Humanities at Baylor University in Waco, Texas. A popular speaker for groups of caregiving professionals across North America, Dr. Hoy has counselled with people in grief and has worked with the professionals who care for them for nearly 30 years. Prior to going to Baylor, Bill directed the bereavement program at Pathways Volunteer Hospice in Long Beach California for more than 16 years. In addition to his university teaching schedule, he provides dozens of professional continuing education workshops and keynote addresses every year.

Dr. William G. (Bill) Hoy

Active in the leadership of the Association for Death Education & Counselling, Dr. Hoy holds the organization's advance practice credential, the FT (Fellow in Thanatology). Since 2013, Bill has served on the Association's board and in 2014, Bill was elected to a three-year term as the association's Treasurer.

Bill edits GriefPerspectives, an email newsletter read every month by more than 4,500 caregiving professionals and volunteers. His book, Guiding People Through Grief (Compass, 2007) is in its fourth printing and the newer volume, Road to Emmaus (Compass, 2008) is in its third. Along with Dr. Laura Lewis (University of Western Ontario), he co-authored the chapter "Bereavement Rituals and the Creation of Legacy" in the recently-published Grief and Bereavement in Contemporary Society (Routledge, 2011).

His newest book, Do Funerals Matter? The Purposes and Practices of Death Rituals in Global Perspective (Routledge, 2013) takes a practical anthropologist's look at the "anchors" present in funeral rituals around the world and throughout history. Additionally, he has written more than 100 journal articles and educational pamphlets for bereaved people and the professionals and volunteers who care for them.

Children are not supposed to die before their parents. When a baby dies, the “natural order” seems undermined at its most basic level. “This isn’t supposed to be the way life works,” we cry. While a bereaved parent would give anything to change the circumstances, we are reminded hourly that the loss is very real. In addition, grief is likely complicated by expectations—those of yourself, your mate, your family, and your friends.

WHAT YOU CAN EXPECT

Grief is more than an emotion—it is a collision of every emotion a human can possibly feel, shaking us “from top to bottom.” Even though we are sometimes uncomfortable with emotions, grief often includes anger, guilt, fear, loneliness, and sadness. Grief is not just emotional, though.

You may notice that you are more tired and without much appetite. You might find sleeping is difficult, too. While physical symptoms like these are common for people in grief, be sure to talk to your health professional if you find these symptoms problematic.

The death of a child also challenges us mentally. Like when experiencing any significant stress, you might find it difficult to concentrate or to remember where you have put things. Simple tasks sometimes require much more time and one may start and stop the same project many times. Make “to do” lists of your projects and tasks to help keep track.

A baby dying often evokes profound spiritual questions for parents and family members, too. “How could God have allowed this?” and “Why didn’t God do something to save my child’s life?” are typical questions from grieving parents.

Asking these kinds of questions does not mean your faith is weak.

When a baby dies, one does not just “get over it.” In fact, a parent’s grief is a long-term process of adjustment. You must learn to deal with the questions about why this happened and cope with the many hopes and dreams that died with your baby. Writing in a journal and talking with a supportive friend can be very useful in working through grief.

DEALING WITH THE EXPECTATIONS OF OTHERS

Bereaved parents often report that some of their hardest work is dealing with the expectations of family members and friends. Though these people care for you and would never intentionally hurt you, their words sometimes sting. “You’re young and can have another baby” or “She would never have been normal anyway” are hurtful words offered by people who wrongly think they are helpful.

Parents who have suffered a miscarriage or stillbirth are sometimes told things like, “At least it wasn’t a real child” or “At least you didn’t get to know him.” The truth is, however, that the death of a baby at any stage of development is a major loss because this baby is your child.

GRIEF IN YOUR FAMILY

While parents carry a heavy load of grief after a baby’s death, be certain that other members of your family hurt, too. Often forgotten in the process, grandparents feel the intense pain of grief when a grandchild dies. But they must also helplessly watch you—their own child in great pain, creating what one grandma called the “double whammy.”

Other children in the family also experience the impact of a baby’s death. Even very young children sense things at home are different. In fact, young children realize they are being left out of the process and this increases their anxiety that they have somehow caused their parents’ sadness. You must be honest with surviving children; they will learn about healthy grieving from you.

Since there are often major changes in a grieving child’s behavior and attitude, make sure you notify people who are significant in your child’s life such as teachers, scout leaders, and coaches. They can provide extra support like sitting with your child during the funeral.

WHERE TO GO FROM HERE

As you face an uncertain future, life is filled with questions. Since two parents often grieve the loss of a child very differently, you will need to be extra patient with your mate. Be supportive and ask questions but do not expect him or her to grieve in the same ways you are grieving.

Often, the death of a baby raises questions about future pregnancies, as well. “When should we think about another baby?” and “What if this happens again?” are normal questions for parents to contemplate.

Do not forget that the care of a doctor, therapist, or member of the clergy can be very helpful now and in the months ahead. Your funeral director or hospital maternity unit can refer you to a support group and resources especially for parents living through the death of a baby.

Be patient with your spouse, children, family, and friends. But also be patient with yourself as you learn to grow through this very difficult grief.
